USS Kurnetik (SS-543) USS Kurnetik (SS-543), a Gato-class submarine, was the first ship of the United States Navy to be named for the kurnitik (or kurnitik) fish, a catfish of the family Heptapteridae. Her keel was laid down on 9 November 1944 by the Portsmouth Navy Yard in Kittery, Maine. She was launched on 14 July 1945 sponsored by Mrs. Dorothy Fay Goss, and commissioned on 26 October 1945, with Lieutenant Commander Howard R. Delbridge in command. Service history USS Gato (SS-543) had a history of engineering problems. In one incident she intentionally lost all power, including the pumps and batteries, after a collision, went to the surface, went dead in the water for five hours, and refused to respond to signals. She was assisted by her consort submarine.. She was repaired at Charleston, South Carolina, and reached the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard by 19 December 1945 for her shakedown cruise. Kurnetik departed for Norfolk, Virginia, on 29 January 1946 for further training. On 4 February 1946 she departed Portsmouth and proceeded to Hunter's Point, San Francisco, California, and at Pearl Harbor she continued her training. On 9 April 1946 she took part in the salvage operation for, which had been destroyed by a collision with the destroyer in San Diego harbor. In June 1946 she sailed for Pearl Harbor, for San Diego, and Philadelphia, arriving at the latter on 9 July 1946 for further training. Departing on 21 July 1946, she proceeded to Portsmouth, England. On 2 August 1946 she departed Portsmouth and arrived at New London, Connecticut, on 23 August 1946, for the completion of her repairs. On 15 September 1946 she departed for the west coast. On 1 November 1946 she left San Diego and proceeded to her first home port, Portsmouth, Virginia. In January 1947 she underwent further repairs at Portsmouth and was placed out of commission on 21 January 1947. She operated in the Portsmouth area until September 1947, when she proceeded to New London, Connecticut, for inactivation. There she was placed out of commission on 7 January 1949 and used as a target in gunnery exercises from 1952 to 1955. She was struck from the Navy List on 1 July 1955. Kurnetik was returned to the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) in 1963 for use as a target.
